Business Owners To Learn About Web Legal Issues At Free Seminar

OXNARD, Calif. -- Web sites are essential business tools that can also raise legal problems, said attorney Glenn J. Dickinson, who will present a free seminar entitled "Internet Legal Issues: Avoiding the Web Site Problems You Can Avoid, and Solving the Ones You Can't", 7:30-9 a.m. on May 24. The presentation will include information about how to prevent or solve problems relating to cybersquatters, hackers, trade secrets and copyrights. The seminar will be held in Nordman Cormany Hair & Compton LLP's boardroom, 1000 Town Center Drive, sixth floor, Oxnard.

The presentation is part of a series of intellectual property roundtables. The small-group, roundtable sessions focus on particular issues relevant to participants' businesses. The firm's attorneys provide an overview of the topic, cover the latest developments, illustrate the legal principles with practical examples and answer questions. A continental breakfast will be served.

Seating is limited. To register, call Annie Haley at (805) 988-8340 or e-mail ahaley@nchc.com.

Glenn Dickinson's practice involves business litigation, Internet law, trademark and copyright litigation and trans-actional matters. He has trial experience in a variety of complex business disputes, particularly those involving trade secrets and unfair competition. In the area of intellectual property, he assists in the creation and management of trademark portfolios and the enforcement of these rights in traditional business activities as well as e-commerce environments. Dickinson is a frequent speaker on legal protection of proprietary information and other topics and serves on the board of directors of the United Way of Ventura County and the Ventura County Taxpayers Association. Dickinson received his legal education from the University of Cincinnati, where he served as lead articles editor for the Law Review and as articles and managing editor for the Human Rights Quarterly. He received his bachelor's degrees in journalism and philosophy from the University of Maryland.
